SENTENCED TO BE HANGED!

Extreme Sentence Passed Upon Ira Green and William Dillen.

BY JUDGE JOHN G. LOVE

For the Murder of Turnkey Jerry Condo In the Centre County Jail on the Night of July 29th While Escaping from Jail.

THEY APPEAL FOR A NEW TRIAL.

Ira Green and William Dillen convicted of the murder of Turnkey Jerry Condo in the Centre County jail on the night of July 29th were brought into court Monday morning at ten o'clock and Judge John G. Love passed the sentence of death upon them. It was a solemn occasion and everyone present was deeply impressed. The prisoners were brought in by Deputy Sheriff Jackson and at five minutes past ten Judge Love took his seat and Court Cryer Hunter solemnly called the Court to order.

Both Green and Dillen seemed to feel their position keenly. Green was the more nervous of the two and his hands twitched. Both were very pale and Green face bore several days growth of beard.

Judge Love asked the prisoners if they had anything to say before sentence should be passed and their counsel, Judge Furst, responded in their behalf as follows:

"May it please the Court. Whatever is said the prisoners desire me to speak for them. Under the circumstances of the case, I know that nothing that the prisoners, or counsel for them, can or may say can change at this time the inevitable result of the law and, therefore, there are only two or three things that would be appropriate to say under circumstances of this kind.

"They have, all the way through, adhered to the one thought, not denying the lamentable death of Mr. Condo, they have said and testified on the witness stand that their intent was solely to effect an escape, not to kill. No intent to take life existed in their minds. This, of course, is the distinguishing criterion of murder of the first degree from murder in the second. That defence was presented in their trial as well as it could be presented, without having a favorable opportunity to obtain witnesses such as they might have had, owing to their good character.

"I further feel it my duty, speaking for the prisoners, to say that they feel that their case was tried under a very great excitement of the public mind, with prejudice all against them, that they did not have and they do not today feel that they have had a fair and impartial trial before the court and jury.

"These are the only points that would be appropriate now to refer to, except the further fact that they deplore the death of Mr. Condo just as much perhaps as anyone can. They deplore their own situation. They know that, in the state of this record, while perhaps the case has not finally passed beyond the jurisdiction of this court to correct error, nevertheless it would be unusual for the court to stay its hand at this stage of the record and, therefore, they submit themselves to the court and to the law."

The court then requested Ira Green to stand up and pronounced sentence upon him as follows:

"We are about to perform one of the most painful and probably trying duties that devolves upon either a court or an individual.

"After careful consideration of all the case, we cannot help but believe that you had a fair trial. When any doubtful point came up in our mind during the trial, we gave the prisoners the benefit of it in our ruling. You were very ably defended and, from all the evidence and the character of the assault made, we were not persuaded that we either had committed any error or that the evidence would not warrant the verdict, so it becomes our duty simply to impose the penalty provided by law, your counsel having spoken for you.

"As we are about to perform this duty will the people in the Court House rise. (Audience rises.)

"The sentence of the law, therefore, which we impose is that you, Ira Green, prisoner at the bar, be taken from hence to the jail of Centre county, from whence you came, and from thence to the place of execution within the walls of the said jail, the time thereof to be fixed as provided by law, and that you there be hanged by the neck until dead. May you be able to make peace with your God and may He have mercy on your soul."

"William Dillon will you stand up.

"It it not necessary for us to repeat what we said to Mr. Green prior to the imposition of the sentence, but it applies to your case as well and there is nothing left for us to do but impose the sentence provided by law, which we will now impose.

The sentence of the court is, according to law, that you, William Dillon, prisoner at the bar, be taken hence to the jail of Centre county, from whence you came, and from there to the place of execution within the walls of the jail, the time thereof to be fixed as provided by law, and that you be hanged by the neck until dead. May you be able to make peace with your God and may He have mercy on your soul."

Ex Judge Furst and Clement Dale Esq., attorneys for the defendants, at once appealed the case to the Supreme court.

Died of Blood Poisoning.

Clark T. Pennington came from Tyrone, where he was employed last Thursday to his home in Allison township, Clinton County, suffering from two large carbuncles on his neck. They became greatly inflamed which developed blood poisoning and he passed away at 4 o'clock Monday morning, aged 35 years. Deceased leavee a wife and two daughters, Esther and Elva. Also three brothers and four sisters, Harry, James and Orvis, who reside in Altoona, Mrs. Boyd Beck and Mrs. Daugherty of State College, Mrs. Eva Furst and Miss May Pennington of Buffalo Run and Mrs. Ellen Brennan of Altoona.

Funeral took place Wednesday afternoon. Interment in Highland cemetery.

The Home Paper.

"Your home paper never loses interest in l you." This possibly you have no given a passing thought says The Portland Oregonian. No matter if you like the newspaper man or if he likes you, if he is true to his profession and publishes a paper for the people he allows no personal matters of petty spites to interfere with his best friends, chronicles your success and sorrows wherever you may be and those who would otherwise forget, you are ever and anon reminded of your existence by an item in your home paper. Others may deceive and defraud you, but your home paper never forgets you. Possibly you do not deserve decent treatment by the paper, but you get it just the same; and if it should at any time say things to cause your fur to turn the wrong way study a moment and see if it has not at various times said many nice things for which you fail to give it credit.

GREAT MINE HORROR!

Sixty Men Probably Perished in Explosion.

IN COLORADO STATE

The Exact Number May Never be Known ---Mine Immediately Took Fire and All the Bodies of the Victims Will Probably be Consumed.

DEADLY FUMES PREVENT RESCUE.

TRINIDAD, Col., Oct. 29.—From 30 to 36 men lost their lives in a terrific explosion which occurred at Mine No. 3 of the Rocky Mountain Fuel and Iron Co., at Tercio, forty miles west of Trinidad yesterday afternoon. The exact number of dead may never be known, as the mine is burning and in all likelihood the bodies will be consumed. A large number of mine officials left here as soon as word of the accident was received. Physicians were picked up all along the line.

The mine in which this occurred employs 80 men and it is believed that at least 60 were in the mine at the time. News of the explosion brought assistance from the adjacent camps and tonight hundreds of men were trying to enter the mine. Deadly fumes overcame the rescuers frequently, but their places immediately were taken by others ready to risk their lives. It was not thought possible that any one in the mine could escape death.

It was impossible to secure names of the dead and injured tonight. Nearly all the miners are Slavs. The mine was opened only a year ago and extended 2,000 feet into the hill. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by dust. But one body has been recovered, that of T. Duran, a driver, who was just entering the tunnel when the explosion occurred. He was torn and burned almost beyond recognition. All the mines within a radius of 20 miles have been shut down and the miners are on the way to assist in the rescue of the bodies.

BURNED TO DEATH.

CHICAGO, October 28.—Fire last night damaged the saloon and music hall and rooming house of H. S. Fewer to the extent of $5,000. Henry A. Schlater, head butcher for Armour & Co., was burned to death and Morris Barns was severely scorched.

The audience in the music hall jammed the exits in their endeavor to escape. None was injured.

HER DEAD BODY FOUND.

SUNBURY, Pa., October 28.—The body of Carrie Feinour, the 18-year-old daughter of the proprietor of a hotel across the Susquehanna river from here, who had been missing since Monday night, was found this afternoon in the canal about a hundred yards from her home. It was at first believed the girl had been murdered, but an examination of the body revealed no bruises. It is supposed by the county authorities that her death was accidental. The girl was employed in this city, and it is believed that she, having missed the last ferry across the river, started to walk to her home across the bridge of the Philadelphia and Reading railway and fell through the trestlework into the river.

The Pennsy's Big Order.

In addition to the order for 600 steel coal cars placed by the Pennsylvania railroad several weeks ago, that company has just given orders for 6200 more. Of these 6,000 are to replace missing numbers and include steel coal cars, wooden-sided gondolas, coke and box cars. These have been equally distributed among the American car and foundry company, the Pressed Steel car company, the Standard Steel car company and the Cambria Steel company. The 200 steel coke cars, like the 600 steel coal cars ordered several weeks ago, are additions to equipment and will be built by the Cambria Steel company. The delivery of these cars is to begin in 90 days, and when once begun the company expects to receive 75 cars daily until the contract is finished. The cars ordered are nearly all of 100,000 pounds capacity and their cost will involve an expenditure of fully $6,000,000.

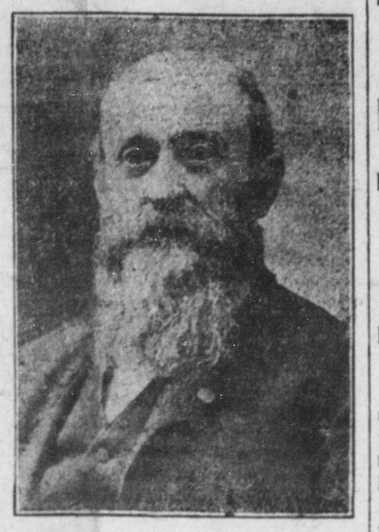
FIFTY YEARS A MASON.

The fiftieth anniversary of the initiation into Bellefonte Lodge No. 268, F. and A. M., of J. Miles Green, was properly celebrated by that Lodge Monday evening.



Joseph Miles Green, eldest son of Joseph and Catherine. Miles Green, was born at Milesburg, Pa., Dec. 1st, 1829. His ancestors on his mother's side came to this country from Wales in 1692. His great-grandfather (Colonel Samuel Miles, who laid out the borough of Milesburg in 1791) was an officer in the French and English War and in the war of the Revolution. His ancestors on his father's side came from England. His grandfather, Joseph Green, was first post-master of Centre county.

He received his education principally in the public schools in Milesburg, with a term or two at the Bellefonte Academy and one at Lewisburg (now Bucknell) University. He learned the machinist trade in the shops of his father, and afterwards entered into partnership with his father and Wm. L. McMeen in the mercantile and foundry business, under the firm name of W. L. McMeen & Co.

During the Anti-Masonic excitement old Centre Lodge No. 191 surrendered its charter and the Lodge room, corner of High and Penn streets, was no longer used for lodge purposes, and was converted into a school room. Here Brother Green attended a school taught by Daniel Canfield, and it was amid these surroundings that he first became interested in Free Masonry.

His father had been a member of the old lodge, and after the institution of Lodge No 268 was admitted to it. He was a subscriber to a paper called the "Masonic Mirror." This paper was eagerly read by his son Miles, whose desire to become a Free Mason was intensified and, when twenty-four years of age, he sent in his petition for membership. The officers of the Lodge at that time were: James Armor, W. M.; Constans Curtin, Sr. W., and Daniel Ammerman, Jr. W. He was entered October 31st, 1854, being the eleventh member initiated in Lodge 268—was passed November 28th, 1854, and was raised to the degree of a Master Mason on January 2nd, 1855. He served as Junior Warden in 1856, as Senior Warden in 1861, and as Master in 1866. He became a member of Lafayette Chapter at Lock Haven, October 27th, 1855, joined Crusade Commandery No. 12, Bloomsburg, March 1st, 1866, and Caldwell Consistory at Bloomsburg in 1868.

In 1861 Brother Green raised a company at Milesburg, of which he was elected captain, which company became a part of the 49th Regt., P. V.

In 1872 he was elected Justice of the Peace, and has been re-elected each successive term since.

$50,000 for Dickinson College.

Dr. George Edward Reed, president of Dickinson College, Carlisle, announced that, having succeeded in raising $50,000 for rebuilding Denny Hall, destroyed by fire March 3, 1904, he has received from Andrew Carnegie a check for $50,000, to be used in payment of obligations incurred in the erection of the new collegiate preparatory building, and for the full completion and equipment of the same.

In accord with the wish of Mr. Carnegie, the new collegiate preparatory building will be named Conway Hall, in honor of Dr. Moncure D. Conway, an alumnus of Dickinson, of the class of '52 and an old friends of Mr. Carnegie.

By this gift Mr. Carnegie has saved Dickinson from serious financial disaster threatened by reason of the fire.

Conway Hall will be completed at once and be made ready for dedication. The new Denny Hall will also be completed in the near future.

REPUBLICANS GREAT RALLY

Big Mass Meeting Held In Bellefonte.

EMINENT SPEAKERS

Hon. John Dalzell, Col. Ned Arden Flood and Capt. A. H. Woodward Delivered Stirring Addresses.

FREEMONT AND LINCOLN VOTERS.

The greatest Republican rally and mass meeting held in Bellefonte in many years took place Tuesday evening November 1. Special trains on all the railroads brought large crowds and many people drove in from the surrounding country. It was a red letter night for republicans and the streets were crowded with people. Congressman John Dalzell, of Pittsburg, Col. Ned Arden Flood, of Meadville, and Capt. A. H. Woodward, of Clearfield, the orators of the evening, were at the Bush House and there they held quite a reception. Hundreds of prominent Republicans from all parts of the county called on them. At 8 o'clock to the music of several bands and accompanied by a large marching club of Republicans who voted for Freemont and for Lincoln they marched around the principal streets to the Court House where the rally was held. At the Centre County bank corner a large marching club of men from Curtin's Works headed by the Curtin band joined the procession. The line of parade was marked with a brilliant display of fire works. The Court House where the meeting was held was handsomely decorated with the National Colors, pictures of Roosevelt and Fairbanks, Governors Curtin, Hastings and Beaver and Congressman Dresser. The bands present were Coleville, Milesburg, Lemont, State College and Curtin.

The meeting was presided over by Col. James P. Coburn, president of the First National Bank of Bellefonte, who made a brief but eloquent address on taking the chair. The secretaries of the meeting were John Gowland, of Philipsburg; and James A. Fiedler, of Boggs township. The vice Presidents were the following named gentlemen:

S. R. Pringle, Martha; G. G. Fink, Huston; Lawrence L. Brown, Rush; C. Avery, Philipsburg; David Chambers, Snow Shoe; Benner Way, Patton; Dr. J. A. Thompson, Half Moon; Frank McCoy, Potter; F. S. Ulrich, Millheim; E. H. Musser, Haines; Sterling Miller, Miles; Harrison Kline, Spring; Philip Dale, College, Township; Newton Brungart, Miles; T. M Gramley; Gregg; John B. Harris, Walker; Christ Sharer, Taylor; Wm. Everhart, Harris; J. L. Holmes, State College Borough; Claude Hess, Ferguson; George O. Boal, Centre Hall; David Thompson, Howard; Linn Pletcher, Howard township; James A. Quigley, Liberty; John Meese, Bellefonte; David Rhinesmith, Benner; William B. Miles, Milesburg; B. W. Shipley, Unionville; Robert Mann, Curtin.

Hon. John Dalzell, of Pittsburg, one of the strongest men the Republican party has in the house of representatives today, was the first speaker of the evening. He delivered one of the finest campaign addresses ever listened to in Bellefonte. It was able, eloquent logical and free from abuse of opposing party. He expressed pleasure at being in Bellefonte and paid a glowing tribute to Bellefonte's three great governors. Gave a history of the Republican party from its birth to the present day and defended and explained protection and the other great doctrines which the party had battled for. We are only sorry we could not get the address to publish in full as it was a campaign argument that was unanswerable.

The next speaker was Col. Ned Arden Flood of the Governors staff, one of the most brilliant orators on the political platform today. Witty and eloquent he kept the attention of his audience and held them spell bound from start to finish. He was entertained while in town by Col. Edward R. Chambers also of the Governors staff. Col. Flood is a young man with certainly a brilliant future before him.

Below we give a few extracts from his speech. Space will not permit a more complete report.

"Commenting on the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt a Democratic Trust newspaper recently said in sneering tones —"Who is this man Roosevelt? He is unsafe, he would set the ocean on fire. My Friends, the standard bearer of the Republican party is known to you all. He will never set the ocean on fire, he will never try, but he stands as he has stood with all his might for those policies which lighted the fires in hundreds and thousands of idle mills, and furnaces and factories and caused this great land, after four Democratic years of misery, to throb again with that life which will go to make this the nation of the future among those great in the world. Who is Roosevelt? When he was marching up, San Juan Hill with the Yankee spirit of '76 burning in his soul, Judge Parker was studying Machiavellian politics in David B. Hill's political kintergarten. Still today Roosevelt marches on, still Parker follows Hill."

"Behold today the picture of a thousand democrats sitting in National convention cheering themselves hoarse one minute over the merest mention of the name of Cleveland, a name actually hissed in the democratic convention four years ago, and then in the very next moment going into spasms of delight over the presence of Bryan. These have been the two chief representatives of democratic doctrine for nearly a quarter of a century and yet they are the two poles of the democracy. They have each led their party, one in three presidential campaigns, the other in two, neither voted for the other and the only political points upon which they can agree are their opinions of each other. Is this not a sad comment on the character of the democracy? In that very picture you find the unfailing sign of a great party's absolute inability to adopt any set of principles which will attract and hold the respect or adherence of the thoughtful, consistent, Godfearing men of the nation or otherwise stand the test of time.

The meeting closed with an eloquent speech by Capt. A. H. Woodward, an interesting and convincing speaker.

He Wasn't the Man.

According to the DuBois Courier "Dutch Kate" Miller, a well-known resident of Lawrence township, and Frank Marella, a contractor now located at Morriedale Mines, were the principals in an interesting habeas corpus proceeding before Judge Allison O. Smith at Clearfield Tuesday afternoon. Some days previous Kate had Marella arrested on the charge of desertion and thereby hangs a tale that is well worth telling.

Some fifteen years ago a tall, angular, sandy-headed Hungarian arrived in this section and after a short courtship won the hand and heart of Katie. They were married in Clearfield and remained together a few months. The Hun's name was Andrew Pollechitz. Hardly had the honeymoon expired before Andy skipped for parts unknown. Katie said he had a natural aversion for work and she didn't feel like supporting a family and though best to give Andy the run. So he ran.

Time melted the resentment in Katie's heart, however, and a short time ago she caught sight of the little Italian named Marella, and at once she recognized him as her long lost husband. All the old passion of love flamed up in Katie's bosom and she flew to his arms. But Marella would have none of her. He protested against recognizing her as his wife, a woman he had never before seen and as a solace to her injured feelings Marella was visited by an officer of the law and served with papers alleging cruel and wanton desertion.

The attorneys for Marella sought to have their client discharged, hence the hearing before Judge Smith Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, Michael Steianzlawipelizerski, John Short and John Stock, all of whom knew the Andy of olden time, the wooer and winner of Kate's affections, certified that Marella was not the man. At first Katie declared he was, but her confidence appeared to be shaken somewhat. She admitted that she could not remember whether her Andy was short or tall, lean or small, ugly or handsome, or whether his hair was golden brown, taffy or jet black. All she knew was that Marella bore a marked resemblance to a photograph she had in her possession, of herself and Andy taken at the time of their marriage. Marella was able to prove an effective alibi and he was discharged by the judge.

—A very pretty but quiet wedding took place Tuesday evening at 7.30 o'clock at the Lutheran parsonage in Pine Grove Mills, where Rev. C. T. Aikens united in marriage Mr. Albert Garbrick and Miss Tillie Jordon, two of Pine Halls most popular young people. After a brief wedding tour they will be at home to their friends at Settleville, where the groom has already a home furnished for his bride. This paper joins with a host of friends in wishing them a long and happy married life.

ing them were never forgotten, as witness these phrases confided to me by Mistress Callista twenty-five years afterward.

"'You have much that most men lack,' remarked the general as they paused to admire some little specimen of Italian art which had been lately received from Genoa. 'You have money—too much money, Moore, by an amount I might easily name—a home which some might call palatial, a lovely if not altogether healthy wife, two fine children and all the honor which a man in a commonwealth like this should ask for. Drop politics.'

"'Politics is my life,' was the cold response. 'To bid me drop it is to bid me commit suicide.' Then, as an afterthought to which a moment of intervening silence added emphasis, 'And for you to drive me from it would be an act little short of murder.'

"'Justice dealt upon a traitor is not murder,' was the stern and unyielding reply. 'By one black deed of treacherous barter and sale, of which none of your countrymen is cognizant but myself, you have forfeited the confidence of this government. Were I, who so unhappily surprised your secret, to allow you to continue in your present place of trust, I myself would be a traitor to the republic for which I have fought and for which I am ready to die. That is why I ask you to resign before"—

"The two children did not catch the threat latent in that last word, but they realized the force of it from their father's look and were surprised when he quietly said:

"'You declare yourself to be the only man on the commission who is acquainted with the facts you are pleased to style traitorous?'

"The general's lips curled. 'Have I not said?' he asked.

"Something in this stern honesty seemed to affect the father. His face turned away, and it was the other's voice which was next heard. A change had taken place in it, and it sounded almost mellow as it gave form to these words:

"'Alpheus, we have been friends. You shall have two weeks in which to think over my demand and decide. If at the end of that time you have not returned to domestic life, you may expect another visit from me which cannot fail of consequences. You know my temper when roused. Do not force me into a position which will cause us both endless regret.'

"Perhaps the father answered; perhaps he did not. The children heard nothing further, but they witnessed the gloom with which he rode away to the White House the next day. Remembering the general's threat, they imagined in their childish hearts that their father had gone to give up his post and newly acquired honors. But he returned at night without having done so and from that day on carried his head higher and showed himself more and more the master both at home and abroad.

"But he was restless, very restless, and, possibly to allay a great mental uneasiness, he began having some changes made in the house, changes which occupied much of his time and with which he never seemed satisfied. Men working one day were dismissed the next and others called in until this work and everything else was interrupted by the return of his late unwelcome guest, who kept his appointment to a day.

"At this point in her narrative Mistress Callista's voice fell and the flame, which had thrown a partial light on her countenance, died down until I could but faintly discern the secretly inquiring look with which she watched me as she went on to say:

"'Reuben and I'—Reuben was her brother—'were posted in the dark corner under the stairs when my father met the general at the door. We had expected to hear high words or some explosion of bitter feeling between them, and hardly knew whether to be glad or sorry when our father welcomed his guest with the same elaborate bow we once saw him make to the president in the grounds of the White House. Nor could we understand what followed. We were summoned in to supper. Our mother was there, a great event in those days, and toasts were drunk, and our father proposed one to the general's health. This Reuben thought was an open signal of peace and turned upon me his great round eyes in surprise, but I, who was old enough to notice that this toast was not responded to and that the general did not even touch his lips to the glass he had lifted in compliment to our mother, who had lifted hers, felt that there was something terrifying rather than reassuring in this attempt at good fellowship. Though unable to reason over it at the time, I have often done so since, and my father's attitude and look as he faced this strange guest has dwelt so persistently in my memory that scarcely a year passes without the scene coming up in my dreams with its accompanying emotions of fear and perplexity. For—perhaps you know the story—that hour was the general's last. He died before leaving the house—died in that same dark library concerning which you have asked so many questions.

"'I remember the circumstances well—how well!—down to each and every detail. Our mother had gone back to her room, and the general and my father, who did not linger over their wine—why should they when the general would not drink?—had withdrawn to the library at the suggestion of the general, whose last words are yet lingering in my ears.

"'The time has come for our little talk,' said he. 'Your reception augurs'—

"'You do not look well,' my father here broke in in what seemed an unnaturally loud voice. 'Come and sit down'—

"'Here the door closed.

"'We had hung about this door, curious children that we were, in hopes of catching a glimpse of the queer new settle which had been put into place that day. But we scampered away at this and were playing in and out of the halls when the library door again opened and my father came out.

"'"Where's Sambo?" he cried. "Tell him to carry a glass of wine to the general. I do not like his looks. I am going upstairs for some medicine." This he whispered in choked tones as he set foot on the stairs. Why I remember it I do not know, for Reuben, who was standing where he could look into the library when our father came out and saw the settle and the general sitting at one end of it, was chattering about it in my ear at the very moment our father was giving his orders.

"'Reuben is a man now, and I have asked him more than once since then how the general looked at that critical instant. It is important to me, very, very important, and to him, too, now that he has come to know a man's passions and temptations. But he will never tell me, never relieve my mind, and I can only hope that there were real signs of illness on the general's brow, for then I could feel that all had been right and that his death was the natural result of the great distress he felt at opposing my father in the one desire of his heart. That glimpse which Reuben had of him before he fell has always struck me with strange pathos. A little child looking in upon a man who ran all his apparent health will in another moment be in eternity—I do not wonder he does not like to talk of it, and yet—

"'It was Sambo who came upon the general first. Our father had not yet descended. When he did it was with loud cries and pitcous ejaculations. Word had gone upstairs and surprised him in the room with my mother. I recollect wondering in all childish simplicity why he wrung his hands so over the death of a man he so hated and feared. Nor was it till years had passed and our mother had been laid in the grave and the house had settled into a gloom too heavy and somber for Reuben to endure that I recognized in my father the signs of a settled remorse. These I endeavored to account for by the fact that he had been saved from what he looked upon as political death by the sudden but opportune decease of his best friend. This caused a shock to his feelings which had unnerved him for life.

"'Don't you think this the true explanation of his invariably moody brow and the great distaste he always showed for this same library? Though he would live in no other house, he would not enter that room nor look at the gloomy settle from which the general had fallen to his death. The place was virtually tabooed, and, though as the necessity arose it was opened from time to time for great festivities, the shadow it had acquired never left it, and my rather hated its very door until he died. Is it not natural that his daughter should share this feeling?'

"It was, and I said so, but I would say no more, though she cast me little appealing looks which acquired an eerie significance from the pressure of her small fingers on my arm and the wailing sound of the wind which at that moment blew down in one gust, scattering the embers and filling the house with banshee calls. I simply kissed her and advised her to go back with me to England and forget this old house and all its miserable memories. For that was the sum of the comfort at my poor command. When after another restless night I crept down in the early morning to peer into the dim and unused room whose story I had at last learned, I cannot say but that I half expected to behold the meager ghost of the unfortunate general rise from the cushions of the prodigious bench which still kept its mysterious watch over the deserted hearthstone."

The detective locks the door of the old mansion

So much for the passages culled from the book itself. The newspaper excerpts, to which I next turned, bore a much later date and read as follows:

"A strange coincidence marks the death of Albert Moore in his brother's house yesterday. He was discovered lying with his head on the identical spot where General Lloyd fell forty years before. It is said that this sudden demise of a man hitherto regarded as a model of physical strength and endurance was preceded by a violent altercation with his elder brother. If this is so, the excitement incident upon such a break in their usually pleasant relations may account for his sudden death. Edward Moore, who unfortunately was out of the room when his brother succumbed—some say that he was in his grandfather's room above—was greatly unnerved by this unexpected end to what was probably merely a temporary quarrel, and now lies in a critical condition.

"The relations between him and the deceased Albert had always been of the most amicable character until they unfortunately fell in love with the same woman."

Attached to this was another slip, apparently from a later paper.

"The quarrel between the two brothers Moore, just prior to the younger's death, turns out to have been of a more serious nature than was first supposed. It has since leaked out that an actual duel was fought at that time between these two on the floor of the old library and that in this duel the elder one was wounded. Some even go so far as to affirm that the lady's hand was to be the reward of him who drew the first blood. It is no longer denied that the room was in great disorder when the servants first rushed in at the sound he made in falling. Everything movable had been pushed back against the wall and an open space cleared, in the center of which could be seen one drop of blood. What is certain is that Mr. Moore is held to the house by something even more serious than his deep grief, and that the young lady who was the object of this fatal dispute has left the city."

Pasted under this was the following short announcement:

"Married, on the 21st of January, at the American consulate in Rome, Italy, Edward Moore of Washington, D. C., United States of America, to Antoinette Sloan, daughter of Joseph Dewitt Sloan, also of that city."

With this notice my interest in the book ceased, and I prepared to step down from the chair on which I had remained standing during the reading of the above passages.

As I did so I spied a slip of paper lying on the floor at my feet. As it had not been there ten minutes before there could be no doubt that it had slipped from the book whose leaves I had been turning over so rapidly. Hastening to recover it, I found it to be a sheet of ordinary note paper partly inscribed with words in a neat and distinctive handwriting. This was a great find, for the paper was fresh and the handwriting one which could be readily identified. What I saw written there was still more remarkable. It had the look of some of the memoranda I had myself drawn up during the most perplexing moments of this strange case. I transcribe it just as it read:

"We have here two separate accounts of how death comes to those who breathe their last on the ancestral hearthstone of the Moore house library.

"Certain facts are emphasized in both:

"Each victim was alone when he fell.

"Each death was preceded by a scene of altercation or violent controversy between the victim and the alleged master of these premises.

"In each case the master of the house reaped some benefit, real or fancied, from the other's death."

A curious set of paragraphs. Some one besides myself was searching for the very explanation I was at that moment intent upon. I should have considered it the work of our detectives if the additional lines I now came upon could have been written by any one but a Moore. But no one of any other blood or associations could have indited the amazing words which followed. The only excuse I could find for them was the difficulty which some men feel in formulating their thoughts otherwise than with pen and paper, they were so evidently intended for the writer's eye and understanding only, as witness:

"Let me recall the words my father was uttering when my brother rushed in upon us with that account of my misdeeds which changed all my prospects in life. It was my twenty-first birthday, and the old man had just informed me that as the eldest son I might expect the house in which we stood to be mine one day and with it a secret which has been handed down from father to son ever since the Moores rose to eminence in the person of Colonel Alpheus. Then he noted that I was now of age and immediately went on to say: 'This means that you must be told certain facts, without the knowledge of which you would be no true Moore. These facts you must hereafter relate to your son or whoever may be fortunate enough to inherit from you. It is the legacy which goes with this house and one which no inheritor as yet has refused either to receive or to transmit. Listen. You have often noted the gold filigree ball which I wear on my watch guard. This ball is the talisman of our house, of this house. If in the course of your life you find yourself in an extremity from which no issue seems possible—mind the strictness of the injunction—an extremity from which no issue seems possible—(I have never been in such a case; the gold filigree ball has never been opened by me)—you will take this trinket from its chain, press upon this portion of it so and use what you will find inside, in connection with'—

"Alas, it was at this point John Judson came rushing in, and those disclosures were made which lost me my father's regard and gave to the informer my rightful inheritance, together with the full secret of which I only got a part. But that part must help me now to the whole. I have seen the filigree ball many times. Veronica has it now. But its contents have never been shown me. If I knew what they were and why the master of this secret always left the library"—

Here the memorandum ceased with a long line straggling from the letter "y" as if the writer had been surprised at his task.

The effect upon me of these remarkable words was to heighten my interest and raise me into a state of renewed hope if not of active expectation.

Another mind than my own had been at work along the only groove which held out any promise of success, and this mind, having at its command certain family traditions, had let me into a most valuable secret. Another mind! Whose mind? That was a question easily answered. But one man could have written these words, the man who was thrust aside in early life in favor of his younger brother and who now by the sudden death of that brother's daughter had come again into his inheritance. Uncle David, and he only, was the puzzled inquirer whose self communings I had just read. This fact raised a new problem for me to work upon, and I could but ask when these lines were written—before or after Mr. Pfeiffer's death—and whether he had ever succeeded in solving the riddle he had suggested or whether it was still a baffling mystery to him. I was so moved by the suggestion conveyed in his final and half finished sentence that I soon lost sight of these lesser inquiries in the more important one connected with the filigree ball. For I had seen this filigree ball. I had even handled it. From the description given I was very certain that it had been one of the many trinkets I had observed lying on the dressing table when I made my first hasty examination of the room on the evening of Mrs. Jeffrey's death. Why had no premonition of its importance as a connecting link between these tragedies and their mysterious cause come to me at the time when it was within reach of my hand? It was too late now. It had been swept away with the other loose objects littering the place, and my opportunity for pursuing this very promising investigation was gone for the night.

Yet it was with a decided feeling of triumph that I finally locked the door of this old mansion behind me. Certainly I had taken a step forward since my entrance there, to which I had but to add another of equal importance to merit the attention of the superintendent himself.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE next morning I swallowed my pride and sought out Durbin. Greeting him in the offhand way least likely to develop his suspicion, I told him that I had a great idea in connection with the Jeffrey case and that the clew to it lay in a little gold ball which Mrs. Jeffrey sometimes wore and upon which she set great store. So far I spoke the truth. It had been given her by some one—not Mr. Jeffrey—and I believed, though I did not know, that it contained a miniature portrait which it might be to our advantage to see.

"You are on a fantastic trail," he sneered, and that was all.

That, from all its seeming inconsequence, it did hold some place in his mind was evident enough to those who knew him, but that it was within reach or obtainable by any ordinary means was not so plain. Indeed, I very soon became convinced that he, for one, had no idea where it was, or after the suggestive hint I had given him he would never have wasted a half hour on me. What was I to do then? Tell my story to the major and depend on him to push the matter to its proper conclusion? "Not yet," whispered pride. "Durbin thinks you a fool. Wait till you can show your whole hand before calling attention to your cards." But it was hard not to betray my excitement and to act the fool they considered me when the boys twitted me about this famous golden charm and asked what great result had followed my night in the Moore house. But, remembering that he who laughs last laughs best, and that the cause of mirth was not yet over between Durbin and myself, I was able to preserve an impassive exterior even when I came under the major's eye. I found myself amply repaid when one of the boys who had studiously avoided chaffing me dropped the following words in my

BRIEF MENTION

Short Items of Local Interest Gathered By The Way Side

—Fine cheese at Sechler Co's.

Foley's Honey and Tar cures coughs and colds and prevents pneumonia. Take no substitutes. C. M. Parrish.

—It's a mistake to imagine that itching piles can't be cured; a mistake to suffer a day longer than you can help. Doan's Ointment brings instant relief and permanent cure. At any drug store. 50 cents.

—Our Porto Rico coffee at 25c, fine Santos coffee at 17c., Nicaragua coffee at 20c, our own special blend at 25c, and our finest mocha and java at 35 cts. per pound. Fine blended teas our own blending at 40c, 60, and 80cts, per lb. Are all good values and steady winners at Sechler & Co.

—Modern investigation has shown alcoholic drinks and other narcotics to be a chief cause of crime, poverty, misery, madness and the degeneracy that leads to anarchy. Thus the use of those substances is a menace to the individual and to the State. Ignofance of the laws of health, especially those which relate to the dangerous character and effects of alcoholic drinks and other narcotics, has led to their use. Therefore, to remove this cause, Congress and the Legislature of every State in the union have enacted laws making the nature and effects of these substances in connection with physiology and hygiene a mandatory public school study.

—Monarch over pain. Burns, cuts, sprains, stings. Instant relief. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil At any drug store.

—At the State Biennial Convention of the Y. M. C. A., held in Trenton. N. J., three delegates were appointed a Committee on Resolutions. Among the resolutions reported and unanimously adopted was the following: "Realizing the increasing power and evil of the liquor traffic, which has been so often proved to be the source of three-fourths of the insanity, sickness, poverty and crime which so desolate our land, and these evils in nearly all instances dating from the first social glass, we will therefore, as young men, with the help of God, leave no stone unturned and use every effort in our power to crush this dragon under foot until it is buried so deep that there shall be no shadow of hope for even its possible resurection."

—Cures croup, sore throat, pulmonary troubles.—Monarch over pain of every ort. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil.

Good for Childern.

The pleasant to take and harmless One Minute Cough Cure gives instant relief in all cases of Cough, Croup and LaGrippe because it does not pass immediately into the stomach, but takes effect right at the seat of the trouble. It draws out the inflammation, heals and soothes and cures permanently by enabling the lungs to contribute pure life-giving and life-sustaining oxygen to the blood and tissues. Sold by Green's pharmacy.

—Parents must not scold public school teachers and teachers must keep mum when irate heads of families make complaints in person to them. This was decided by the Norristown school board Saturday night, when the principals and teachers were directed "to refrain from discussion and argument with parents and guardians, whose conduct interferes with the discipline of the schools," and ask them to lodge their complaint with the borough superintendent, either in person or in writing. Frequently teachers were made unfit for service by the conduct of angry parents and it was necessary to take the scolding from the schoolroom for the general good. Evidently the school management of Norristown have determined to catch up with the procession.

—"A dose in time saves lives." Dr. Woods' Norway Pine Syrup; nature's remedy for cough, colds, pulmonary diseases of every sort.

—The printing of an occasional blood curdling bear story will serve to brace up the kids for whatever may cross their path when the season for hunting big game comes along shortly. Just recently two men named Martin Burgoon and S. I. Grove, hunting for pheasants with shotguns only, in the woods some miles from Ashville, Allegheny county. Burgoon shot at what he thought was a fox, but on investigation found that he had killed a young bear. A sudden roar from behind apprised Burgoon that he would have trouble on his hands and the mother of the cubs attacked him ferociously. He grapled with the maddened animal and was fighting desperately when Grove came to his help. After a bloody fight the bear was killed with a knife thrust, but both men will carry the marks of the struggle to the grave. Burgoon sustained scalp wounds and his right arm was torn, while his companion was badly lacerated about the head and legs.

The November "Smart Set."

There are thirty-seven signed contributions in the November Smart Set, and no magazine can offer a greater variety of stories and poems; certainly no standard is higher. The novelette which opens the issue is called 'The Surrender," and is written by J. H. Twells, Jr. It is a powerful study of divorce, presented with great insight and feeling. The scenes, many of which are dramatic in the extreme, are laid in Paris, and the author reveals an intimate knowledge of the French capital.

A timely essay by the distinguished dramatist, Clyde Fitch, entitled "The Play and the Public," will be widely read and discussed. Mr. Fitch writes from the inside, and everything he says on a dramatic subject is spoken almost ex cathedra.

In the long list of short stories it is difficult to choose any particular one which could be called "the best," for all are superlatively good. Gouverneur Morris's "The Honeymoon" will certainly stick in the memory of numerous readers. It is wonderfully photographic and strikingly original. In a different vein is George Horton's "The Office-Hunters," an amusing picture of social and political life in Washington. "Harmony Jack," by Grace MacGowan Cooke, is a breezy Western tale with plenty of the wholesome atmosphere of the plains. Viola Roseboro's "The Actress That Remembered" is a story of player folk, artistic and with an underlying tone of pathos. "A Rose in Ice" is the story of a manly newspaper reporter and a society girl, written in Herbert D. Ward's direct style. James Huneker's, "The Eternal Duel" occupies only a little space, but it is as cameo like as one of Maupassant's masterpieces. In addition to these tales there are others by such writers as Edna Kenton, Charles Battell Loomis, Virginia Woodward Cloud, Robert E. MacAlarney, Channing Pollock, W. J. Henderson and Arthur Train, besides a story in French by Hugues Le Roux and an essay by Kate Masterson.

The number is rich in excellent verse. Among the contributors are Edith M. Thomas, Joaquin Miller, Theodosia Garrison, Edward W. Barnard, Madeline Bridges, John Vance Cheney, Richard Burton, F. McArthur and Madison Cawein.

Fell Historic Tree.

To preserve one of Mifflin county's oldest landmarks, a tree a century and a half old, and bearing an inscription carved on it in 1773, woodmen have sawed down the patriarch of the forests and removed it to the front yard of Samuel L. Swartzell's home, near Lock Mills.

The tree, which is a beech, stood in the southeastern part of Armaugh township, on what is known as the George Swartzell farm.

The following information was taken from the notes of John Swartzell, of Milroy, an old civil engineer, who was probably better posted on the history of that section of Mifflin county than any other man living:

"An old beech tree, which measures five feet eleven inches in circumference and fifty feet high, being hollow at the butt, stands on the George Swartzell farm. In the bark of this tree Matthias Ruble cut his initials in the year 1773 (M. 1773 R). This was about two years before the Indians made their last raid in that neighborhood. The other names are as follows: J. S., 1831; John Swartzell, from whose notes the history was taken, G. S. R., 1876; George S. Ruble, a grandson of Matthias Ruble, and many others, but all of more recent date.

The tree will be preserved, and known as the Ruble family tree.

Senators and State Honor.

New York and Massachusetts offer a contrast in their treatment of the Senatorship. Massachusetts has sent as successor to Senator Hoar the best man she could secure. New York politicians are apparently going to treat the Senatorship as a perquisite for some typical unit of their number, such as Black. Massachusetts is still a good deal more highly educated place than New York. The Empire State, however, can claim at least the credit of bartering its Senatorships for partisan work than for money, so that it is at least better than Mr. Addicks's view of Delaware. Pennsylvania sent Quay to the Senate, and the Pennsylvania railroad apparently selected his successor. Governor La Follette has been talked about for the Senate, but he says that his present duties are at home. He would make a stir in Washington, not so much because he is an effective speaker as because he is a brilliant politician who thinks it better to remain the free representative of the people than to be retained by some special business or even partisan interest. He might make trouble for the oligarchy. It is rather a pity that Mr. Bryan's hance of going to the Senate seems so slender. He would lend interest to a body in which discussion is not yet entirely absolete.—Collier's for October 29.

For Over Sixty Years.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over sixty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cure wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Sold by all druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take on other kind.

SOME FOOLISH PEOPLE.

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it will wear them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 25c, and 50c trial size free. At all druggists. tf

An Automatic Elevator.

Electric elevators are now on the market in which the control and operation is reduced to the simplest conceivabel terms, so that accidents cannot happen through the ignorance or carelessness of women and children. In this system a passenger desiring to use the elevator presses a button placed near the elevator shaft, and the car, if not in use, immediately travels to that floor and stops automatically. When the car has come to rest at that floor, the door can be opened. The passenger then enters the car and closes the door. Unless the door is tightly closed the car will not leave that floor. Inside the car is a series of push buttons, numbered to correspond with the various floors. The passenger pushes the proper button, and the car proceeds to the desired landing and stops automatically. Not until the passenger has left the car and closed the door can the elevator be controlled from any other floor. Should the passengers desire, for any reason, to stop the car at any point of its travel, he can do so instantly by merely pushing the safety button with which the car is provided.—H. S. Knowlton, in The Engineering Magazine for November.

That is What They say About Them in Bellefonte, and it is Therefore, Reliable.

Another proof, some more evidence, Bellefonte testimony to swell the long list of advocates who endorse the old Quaker remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this convicting endorsement of the claims made for that remarkable preparation:

Mrs. Emma J. Davis, of 246 E. Logan St., says: "I have a great deal of confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills, and have already recommended them in a published testimonial in 1897. I told how I had been relieved of kidney complaint and backache which had kept me suffering for years. Doan's Kidney Pills did this for me when other remedies had failed. Whenever I feel any symptom of my old trouble I send to F. Potts Green's drug store for a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and it never requires more than a few doses to get me right.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

EDITORIAL.

The ticket this year will be a cumbersome one and will be somewhat complicated. It will cause trouble to turn from one column to another to mark a cross after the names of the candidates you wish to vote for and it is possible mistakes may occur which will invalidate the whole ticket. The voter will find this year when he is given his ballot that on the left hand side of it are the names of the different parties, after each one of which is a square. A cross (X) placed in this square will mean a vote for the straight ticket. If a Republican wishes to vote a straight ticket the only way he can do so without marking a cross a number of times is to put a cross mark (X) in the sqnare after the name of his party which is placed on the left hand side of his ticket. It will be an easy matter to make a mistake in marking the ballot and we urge all Republicans who wish the candidates of his party to win to place the cross in the place we have indicated. Don't lose your vote through a mistake. It will be easy to do so. Note the straight ticket.

Speaker Cannon designates Judge Parker "Mr. Facing Both ways." He will have to be "Mr. Facing Every Way" if he is to look the factions of his party in the eye.

Judge Parker seems to have forgotten that the Republican party's policy in the Philippines has, after exhaustive debate, already received the enthusiastic approval of the American people.

When asked why he was going to vote for Roosevelt, a Chicago teamster replied "Because I don't want to lose my job." The average workman has a pretty good idea of what constitutes a paramount issue.

Vote for George E. Lamb, an expert penman and accountant He would make an excellent Prothonotary.

ORVIS' DOUBLE-DEALING TACTICS.

We had heretofore given Ellis L. Orvis credit with all due sincerity in his campaign for judicial honors, but from what has been learned within the past week through absolutely reliable sources we find our confidence in Mr. Orvis was most egregiously misplaced.

*I*nstead of conducting his campaign in an honorable, open and fair manner it is found that Orvis has been double-dealing, straddling and shamefully misrepresenting facts on each and every occasion where he thought a vote could be secured in that manner.

Especially has this been true in his dealings with the liquor license people and those who opposed that particular class. The instances where he has been endeavoring to hoodwink the voters on this question are too numerous to specify here, but a few of his tactics are given as samples and the people can then judge for themselves whether such a man is either qualified or entitled to wear the judicial ermine.

Miles township has but one licensed hotel in it, that being a thoroughly well conducted hostelry at Rebersburg, against the manner of its conduct not a single individual in all that section of the county, or anywhere else, has one word to say. And yet this man Orvis, in his house to house canvass through that section to some of the ultra temperance people whom he approached, he bewailed the fact that a licensed hotel existed there. The people of Miles township and Brush valley are a sober, industrious class of people and have always been able to attend to their own business, licensed hotels and all, without any interference on the part of judicial aspirants.

If Mr. Orvis were sincere in his bewailings it might have more weight. But he was hardly done bewailing the fact, that Miles township has a licensed hotel until he got over into Nittany valley, in Walker township, where he bewailed the fact that there was no licensed hotel, plainly intimating that there should be at least one licensed place at some point along the public highway through Nittany valley. *I*n Brush valley he indirectly intimated that in case of his election he would abolish the license of the Shaffer hotel in Rebersburg and in Nittany valley he as much as intimated to some people that in case of election he would use his office to have one established. Now what is the difference? *I*f it is wrong to have a license in Brush valley why wouldn't it be just as wrong to have one in Nittany valley?

From Philipsburg comes the reliable information of Orvis' double-dealing, the hotel people there he gave to understand that if they voted for him their interests would not be handicapped, while to the ultra temperance people of that progressive borough he is reported to have given all sorts of promises as to what dire visitations he would inflict upon the hotel people in case of his election among the reported changes being a greatly reduced number of licensed places, the compulsion of early evening closing and all such buncombe.

These are facts as reported by various parties. Now who can believe him or trust him? *I*s a man addicted to this kind of double-dealing the proper man for judge of Centre county? Can the people trust such a man for an important position?

*I*t is entirely beyond the comprehension of any thinking person that a majority of the voters of Centre county will elect a man to so high an office who lacks consistency and conducts his campaign in such an underhanded manner.

Vote for John G. Love for President Judge of the Centre County Courts and you will save endless expense to the tax payers if he is elected.

THEY ARE AFTER SPANGLER.

The various Democratic nominees of this county are reported to be after Col. J. L. Spangler because of his alleged offers to trade them off wholesale in return for Republican votes for Orvis. They justly claim all such proceedings as quite unfair to them. They claim to be just as good and really better Democrats than Orvis is to-day or ever was and mean to resent any and all arrangements which would result in defeating Democrats who have always stood by the ticket, for one whose political status was never above reproach. We don't blame the Democratic nominees for defending their own rights. They were ostensibly placed on their ticket for the purpose of being elected, and not to be used as trading stock for the election of an anti-Bryanite and to defeat a personal antagonist.

The best method of procedure for the various Democratic nominees is to repay Spangler in his own coin. If any trading is to be done they can take a hand in the matter and secure votes for themselves by turning Democratic votes in for Judge Love. They are pre-eminently justified in doing this and really direct if they fail to do it. They all know that Spangler cares but little whether they are elected or not only so that Judge Love is defeated.

How do you like the combination, Democratic nominees?

The cry of the opponents of Judge Love is, that they want a change, that one term is enough for a man to hold office, and yet, it has been and is, the universal rule among these same howlers, for the one term in office, to give every other official in and about the court house two terms, on the plea that he is entitled to a second term as an endorsement that he has made a creditable official. This every one seems to accept without dispute. Why then make such a howl about the friends of Judge Love asking a re-election of this man, the best qualified of any one in the county or the position.

H. H. Harshberger Esq., will be the next District Attorney of Centre County. Vote for him and you will be voting to put good capable public men in public office.

The people of Walker township were entirely unaware that they were in such dire need of a licensed hotel until candidate Orvis came through there and in his efforts to get votes informed the good people of Nittany valley how sadly they were in need of such an innovation. It is a fortunate thing for the sturdy farmers of that neighborhood that Orvis is a candidate for judge otherwise they might never have learned of their real needs in this world. But they are not so easily hoodwinked as all this.

Vote for Solomon R. Dresser for Congress and thus help to insure a Republican house of representatives.

The time of the election rapidly draws near and it is the duty of every Republican to use his best endeavors to get out a full party vote. A defeat or greatly reduced majority in this state this fall for the Republican party would be hailed with delight by the Democrats and would place them in excellent fighting shape for the future. The great prosperity which the country is now enjoying is through the wise administration of the Republican party under the leadership of William McKinley, and Theodore Roosevelt. Republicans, let all factional differences be forgotten and a united party go to the polls this fall.

Vote for Knisely and Womelsdorff for the legislature and you will have good, clean, honest representatives.

REPUBLICANS DO YOUR DUTY.

When the 8th of November rolls around, every man ought to realize that he owes it to himself to get out to the polls and cast his vote for the ticket of his choice. He owes it to his country, to his State and to his family and neighbors Patriotism and business are concerned.

The election for Congress this year is very important. A national House of Representatives is to be chosen, and a great deal of the country's prosperity and industrial welfare for the next two years depends upon the result. There is no telling what unrest and positive disaster might follow a Democratic victory at the polls.

Not since the Fifty-third Congress have the voters of this country trusted the control of the House of Representatives to the Democratic party. They had turned over the reins of the *G*overnment to the *D*emocrats and the atrocious Wilson tariff law was the result. The county suffered for years thereafter, although in the very next Congress the Republicans were given control again and repealed the law.

It is not credible that the people of this land are now contemplating turning the House over to the Democrats. They have been living and prospering under Republican legislation and they know what it is. They have no reason to change.

But the only way to make sure that there is no change is to get out to the polls and vote. There are Republican votes enough in the land to assure the retention of a good working majority in the House, but they will not have to be cast. It will not do any good for a man to sit by his fireside and entertain protective tariff and sound money doctrines. He must go to the polls and make them good,

So be sure that you turn out yourself and bring a neighbor with you. Vote for every man on the Republican ticket.

THINGS TO BE REMEMBERED,

Remember 1893-1896 and the days of industrial gloom.

Remember 1893-1896 and the home comforts that were wanting.

Remember 1893-1896 and the wives and children wanting clothes.

Remember 1893-1896 and the thousands of capable mechanics looking in vain for work.

Remember 1893-1896 and the fulfilled promises made by the Republican party in the campaign of 1896.

Remember 1893-1896 and the delusive promises made by the Democratic party in the campaign of 1892.

Remember 1893-1896 and the landlord waiting at the door for the rent money which could not be provided.

Remember 1893-1896, when the factory whistle failed to blow for another day's work, another day's pay.

Remember 1893-1896 and the countless number of women and children waiting, faint with hunger, for the bread which never came.

Remember 1893-1896 and the heartsickness, the worry, the unpaid and the unpayable debts, and all the many ills that attend the man out of work.

Remember 1893-1896 and the hundreds of thousands of laborers walking the streets from sunrise to sunset looking for the work which could not be found.

Remember 1893-1896 and the un-American soup houses and other forms of charity necessary to relieve those who need no relief when they can get work.

Don't forget to turn out on Election Day. It is a big election, a very important one to every man, woman and child in this country, and every man ought to make it his business to go to the polls. The Republican party is not afraid to give that advice to even their opponents, if it will reach Republicans in so doing, because if every voter turns out the Republicans are in the majority in this country and they will elect their ticket.

Vote for John L. Knisely for assembly. A self made man.

To the Teachers of Centre County.

ESTEEMED CO-WORKERS:

As one among hundreds of Centre county people who are interested in the matter, I wish to call your attention to something which concerns you and me more vitally than all the political buncombe which may be brought to your attention.

You may or you may not be affected by the recently enacted law of Pennsylvania fixing the minimun salary at $35 per month. Prior to the enactment of this law, school boards could fix the salary at any price they wished and in many cases it was below the present minimum.

When the bill fixing the present minimum was before the Legislature J. William Kepler was one of the few who voted against it Therefore, teachers and their friends who are to day reaping the benefit of that enactment owe Mr. Kepler nothing. Even those teachers who are not affected by this bill, because of having previously received above that amount, have a goodly share of sympathy for the profession, as a whole.

The very next day, after having voted against the increase of teachers' pay to $35 per month, this same man Kepler stepped up and voted to increase the salary of Common Pleas Judges from $4-000 to $5,000 per year. This is a matter of record and can be found in the Legislative Record for the session of 1903, page ——— What do you think of him? Have you all the kindly feeling for him? Is a man who uses his influence and vote to keep our salary down to the smallest pittance entitled to our support and be returned to the Legislature? Hardly.

And this isn't the worst of it. Current report has it that certain powerful influences will be brought to be bear during the coming session of the Legislature to repeal the law fixing the minimum salary of school teachers at $35 per month and thereby allowing school boards to pay as small a salary as they wish. J. William Kepler voted to keep it below $35, and we must expect him if elected, to do the same, when the subject is brought up again.

In case you are enjoying the privileges of the law to-day, do you wish to return to the former pittance of wages? If so, vote and use your influence for the election of J. William Kepler. If not, use the same influence and much more to defeat him at the polls on November 8. Let me tell you, he is a dangerous man for the best welfare of the poorly paid public school teachers. He has no sympathy for us and will vote against our interests every time, as his record in the past plainly shows. Don't give him a chance, because one vote may decide the whole question!

Although the recipient of this may not be a voter, or the $35 per month salary question may not affect his or her remuneration, yet there is a certain affinity among us which deserves thoughtful consideration.

If you are not a voter, you may have a father, one or more brothers or friends who do vote in Centre county and whom you can influence to vote against this man Kepler and thereby help to defeat one who voted against our common interests and of whom we can expect nothing else than that he would vote for a repeal of the minimum salary bill.

As a member of the Legislature during the last session Mr. Kepler drew a salary of about $375 per month and yet he begrudged the common school teacher of Centre county the pittance of $35 per month and voted against allowing him that much. Is that the kind of a man you want to represent us?

These are facts, and this is not a political document. We want no man at Harrisburg who votes against our best and much deserved interests. It is our common duty to see that Mr. Kepler is not re-elected, for his past record shows he is our personal enemy.

It is up to you as to whether you will use your every influence in the effort to defeat a bitter foe.

A BROTHER TEACHER.

A Moshannon Man's Opinion.

MOSHANNON, Oct., 25

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:

In the Centre Democrat, about two weeks ago, we saw in the Moshannon items, that "Teddy" would be weighed in the balance this fall, and also mentioned "Fairbanks Standard Scales."

We are of the opinion that when "Teddy" is weighed, he will not be found wanting, and Parker will have to take a back seat when the above takes place.

In our opinion all the politics the Democrats are able to discuss, is the brooking over the increase in expenses in the last twenty years, which does not seem to be helping their case much according to what the paper say and any thinking man may see.

"MOSHANNEN."

Many of the people of Miles township and some of them heretofore strong *D*emocrats, take it as an insult for candidate Orvis to come down there and tell them whether they need or don't need a licensed hotel. It is surmised that they know what they need, irrespective of Orvis' opinion.

It is hardly likely that many of the Centre county school teachers or their friends, male or female, will lose many days in a vain effort to have candidate Kepler elected to the Legislature. His vote against the minimum pittance of $35 per month two years ago is too fresh in their memory. Above all men on the Democratic ticket this year none deserves more ignominious defeat than this very man Kepler, and it is up to the school teachers and their friends to defeat him. They can easily do it.

No Democratic candidate can deny that every good piece of legislation on the statute books has been opposed by Democratic Congressmen.

Most of the Democratic members of Congress are just as much in favor of free silver now as they were in 1896. The sound money Democrats are in the minority.

The American people do not want their prosperity interrupted by Congressional tinkering with the tariff or the currency system.

Candidate Davis is about the only venerable thing connected with the Democracy this year. Its issues are fresh every morning and live but a day.

Academy Defeats Bellwood.

The Bellefonte kept up its winning streak by defeating the strong Bellwood team on Saturday at the fair grounds by a score of 5-0. The weather was fine, the attendance large and the game the prettiest bit of foot ball seen here in many a day. Both elevens were at their best and produced a great variety of up to date foot ball manoeuvers. Last year the Academy team had difficulty in making consistent gains through Bellwoods line, defeating her in each game by 2-0. On Saturday the strong aggressive work of the forwards helped Gutelius, Weaver, Roelofs, Miller and Taylor in making steady gains by line and end plays. In the first half the Academy carried the ball without a fumble from the centre of the field to the goal line where Gutelius made the winning touchdown. Next Saturday a large delegation will accompany the team to State College where they will line up a against the Scrubs. A good game is looked for.

The line up.

Bellefonte	Positions	Bellwood
Taylor	left end	Van Seyoc
Helman	centre	Miller
Meyer	right guard	Goss
Stine	right tackle	Shaner
Lane	right end	Raugh
Weaver	quarter-back	C. Wentzel
Gutelious	right half-back	M. Wentzel
Miller	full-back	(Capt.) McCoy

—A man talks about his own business. But, as a matter of fact, his business owns him. His whole life is regulated by the demands of the business. The time at which he rises, his breakfast hour, the time given to meals, are all determined by business obligations. He rushes through lunch because he "can't spare the time from business" to eat leisurely. He won't take a rest because he is needed at the store or office. He is in fact an absolute slave to business. The results which follows this slavery are to be seen on every hand. Men dyspeptic, irritable, nervous, with drawn faces, and hollow eyes, sit at the desk or stand behind the counter until they collapse in a fit of sickness, or are taken away by heart failure. Those who cannot escape the exactions of business will find a friend in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, increases the action of the blood-making glands, increases the vitality and physical vigor. It makes men strong and prevents those business breakdowns which so often terminate fatally.

Bricker—Williams.

On Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock J. M. Bricker, of Buffalo Run, and Mrs. Susan Williams, of Bellefonte, were united in holy bonds of wedlock at the home of the groom and in the presence of quite a large number of guests. The ceremony was performed by Rev. David F. Cupp. The wedding march was played by Mr. Harry Keister of Bellefonte. An excellent wedding dinner was served after which the bride and groom left on a wedding tour to eastern cities.

World's Fair Excursions.

The low-rate ten-day coach excursions of the Pennsylvania railroad afford a fine opportunity for those who have not yet seen it to visit the greatest exposition ever held in this country. Wednesdays, November 2nd, 9th, 16th and 23rd are the dates during the last month the Fair is open. Rate, $15.50 from Bellefonte. Train leaves at 1:05 p. m., connecting with special train from New York arriving at St. Louis 4.15 p. m. next day.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Woodring of this place visited in Bellefonte last Thursday.

Mrs. Bella Woodring spent Sunday in Altoona at the home of her daughter Mrs Robt. Robinson.

The rabbits this year must be scarce and good runners as a great many hunters have been out and came back without any game.

The Hon. Judge Jno. G. Love rendered an address to the people of this town on last Friday evening in the K. G. E. Hall. The attendance was great, not only men and young folks were there but women who were anxious to hear Judge Love's speech regarding the welfare and conditions of Americans, their duties and opportunities.

CHESTNUT GROVE.

Mrs. James Hoover and son of Bellefonte, is spending a few days in our town making apple butter.

Miss Jennie Shirk returned home after a short stay at Pleasant Gap.

Mrs. Myrtle Markley and little daughter fpent Sunday at Mc. Jacob Shirks.

Harry Fetzer spent Sunday at home he being employed at Beech Creek.

Mr. Edward Walker was seen on our streets Sunday.

Preaching by Rev. Mumma was well attended on Sunday.

Big Fire at Johnstown.

Fire on Monday destroyed the Cobaugh block on East Franklin street, and the residence of ex-Mayor L. D Woodruff, on Water street, causing a total property loss estimated at $45,000, only partly covered by insurance. Owing to an inadequate water supply the firemen were unable to get to work promptly and the Cobaugh building was wreck thirty minutes after the first alarm sounded. The Woodruff residence adjoined. No cause as yet has been assigned for the fire.

Five lodges, the Knights of the Mystic Chain, Knights of Macca bees, A. F. & A. M., and two organizations of Knights of the Golden Eagle occupied rooms on the third floor of the Cobaugh block and lost all their paraphernalia.

Death of Mrs. Jane Wilson Shivery.

Mrs. Jane Wilson Shivery died Monday morning at 11 o'clock at her home on North Allegheny street from a complication of diseases. She had been ill about six months.

The deceased was born in Half Moon Valley February 10, 1828. Her grandfather organized the first Friends meeting in this part of the state. She belonged to quite a prominent family of this section of the state, her father at one time being a stockholder in the Pennsylvania railroad and a banker.

She leaves the following children: Dr. G. B., of Winburn; D. H., Margaret E., and Sarah E., of Bellefonte.

Funeral will take place this Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment in the Union cemetery.

Although he don't need it the people of Centre County should see that Col. E. A. Irvin has a rousing complimentary vote for State Senator.

Reopening Day.

On Nov. 6th. 1904, the U. B. church at Paradise will be re-opened and the following program will be rendered.

At 9.30 a. m. Praise service.

10.30 Preaching service.

Special music will be rendered by the choir.

Dedicatory sermon will be delivered by the Rev. A. Davidson.

EVENING.

At 7 p. m. Song Service.

7.30 The platform meeting with addresses by the following persons.

Rev. A. Davidson, Miss May Whitehead, Rev. D. J. Davis, a solo by Miss Emma Lytle, a recitation by Miss Margaret Davidson. A large attendance is expected at these services.

D. W. Pletcher, of Howard, our candidate for County Surveyor could not be excelled. He has talent and ability for this kind of work. Vote for Pletcher.

Hunting Notes.

The woods and mountains were full of hunters Monday and Tuesday but the game reported captured is not very great.

The Fleetfoot Hunting Club of Pine Grove Mills, State College and Rock Springs brought in one deer. It was shot by George Rossman.

The Riley Club of Boalsburg were more fortunate. They captured three deer. Robert Gilbreath shot one and Calvin and Edward Riley each one.

Died at Hospital.

Miss Mary Bechdel, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Bechdel of Eagleville, died about 5 o'clock Sunday evening at the Lock Haven hospital. Miss Bechdel had been sick for about three weeks and was removed to the hospital where she underwent a serious operation. She was about 23 years of age and was well known and liked in the community in which she resided and her death will be a great shock to her many friends.

She is survived by her mother, two brothers, Curtis and Harris, and two sisters, Miss Edith and Mrs. J. McCloskey, all of whom reside in Eagleville.

The remains were taken to Eagleville Monday to the home of her sister, Mrs. J. McCloskey.

THE GINGER JAR.

Seeing Things.

Oh, See the Man!

How Thin and Nervous he is! How Careworn is his Look! How Hurriedly he Enters! Who is he?

That, my son, is the richest man in town.

Oh, see what he is ordering for Luncheon! A bowl of milk and some crackers! He will not get indigestion, will he?

No, my Boy, he will not get it, because he already has it. Besides, he has asked for a cup of hot water.

Does he drink that for Indigestion?

Partly for that reason my boy, and partly because it does not cost anything.

What will his Check be?

Fifteen Cents, and he will be Careful to have the exact change, so the waiter can whistle.

Oh, see the other man!

How Gorgeous are his clothes! How many friends he has with him! See him buying drinks for them! Who is he?

That, my boy, is the only son of the Richest man in town.

See him ordering luncheon for his Friends! If the waiter brings it all at once he will need a dray. Expenses is no object is it?

No, my boy, he likes to entertain and be considered a liberal man and good fellow.

Does he work for his money?

Yes, he works the Old Man.

Will he have indigestion, like his father?

Yes, indeed, but not for the same reason.

If he is going to suffer, also, is his Method any better than the Old Man's?

The waiter will tell you that it is, my Boy.

A Proof.

"Si," remarked the smart Aleck, "they say that big ears are a sign of generosity. Do you believe it?"

"I know it," replied Farmer Applegate; "leastways I've observed that a mule is a heap more generous with his heels than any other critter."

Reasons for Belief.

"Do you believe in second sight?" asked the co-ed, with a taste for psychology.

"Indeed, I do," replied the handsome senior. "When I met Miss Passee the other evening I thought she was beautiful, but I got a second I look at her the next morning and was saved any further anxiety on her account."

By Sad Experience.

Binks—I don't suppose many of the Japs know any English.

Jinks—Not very much, I guess, but I'll bet they all know General Sherman's definition of war by this time.

The World's Fair.

It isn't until the honeymoon has waned that a man realizes he has secured a season ticket to a lecture course.

Golden hair is the only kind of halo a bleached blonde is likely to wear.

Even if she could, no self-respecting woman would vote unless she had a new tailor-made gown to go to the polls in.

It's queer how a woman can dress so that she doesn't look as plump in the winter as she does in the summer, although she has lots more clothes on.

A strictly truthful man might as well give up trying to be popular with women.

The Coleville Philosopher.

I guess if the Japs and Russians had had time to register they would all vote in favor of the peace congress.

Si Swallow differs from Alt Parker in the fact that he is willing to admit that he won't be elected.

Kuropatkin is a good deal like the Democratic party in his ability to refrain from knowing when he is licked.

My old friend, Hank Davis, isn't making any more noise than he was eighty-two years ago today.

A man shows a lack of refinement in being killed at a grade crossing when he can easily be run over by an automobile in a much more fashionable section of the city.

Faith.

Charley's aunt had impressed his young mind with the efficacy of prayer.

The youngster was very fond of sweet cider and showed his faith by offering up this petition, overheard by his mother, the next evening.

"Dear God, please let me live as long as the cider press is in town."

Down to Stay.

Before the war how scarce they were,
The Russian submarines;
But since the Japs attacked the fleet
Their number's in the teens.

Successful Failures.

"Gotrocks has made a great success out of his business."

"How did he do it?"

"By repeated failures."

7000 FRUIT TREES.

C. P. Long is Setting out a Twenty-Five Acre Orchard.

It is the aim of C. P. Long, the Spring Mills general merchant and lumberman, to have an orchard of seven thousand trees. He has now growing three thousand trees, all in good, thrifty condition, and it is his purpose to plant one thousand trees each year until the seven thousand mark noted above is reached.

The orchard is located midway between Spring Mills and Millheim, north of Salem Reformed church, on the property known as the Robert Smith place. An orchard to accommodate such a large number of trees will cover a plot of about twenty-five acres. The varieties of fruit now growing are apples, plums, pears, cherries and peaches.

The place is tenanted by John Hoover, but H. H. Rachau is the man upon whom Mr. Long depends to oversee the planting of the trees and to whom is entrusted the care of the same.

No better place for an orchard could be selected, and with proper care and attention the return will undoubtedly prove successful from a financial point of view. Mr. Long's success will induce other to follow his course. These latter will have his experience to profit by. The community is indebted to Mr. Long for the progressive spirit he is showing, and leading the way to the development of a possible fruit belt with scarcely a limit. Success to Mr. Long.—Centre Reporter.

"Watch The Kidneys."

"When they are affected, life is in danger," says Dr. Abernethy, the great English physician. Foley's Kidney Cure makes sound kidneys. C. M. Parrish

His Last Will.

A man, either through ambition, sense of duty, or in self-defense against boredom, works hard and accumulates property. Should he marry, he is expected to provide liberally for his wife, to carry a life insurance for her benefit, to give his children every advantage of education as it is now understood or misunderstood. He works cheerfully, finds little pleasure outside of his daily routine, is prematurely old. He dies. He may be a widower; he may leave behind him a second wife; or he may leave his only wife, the mother of his children. His will is open and read. He has made a liberal provision for those near him. But he took the liberty before his death to bequeathing certain sums of money, through a feeling of sentiment or duty to others, sums that will lessen in comparatively slight degree the money which would otherwise be distributed among those who are already in pecuniary comfort. The poor wretch thought he had his right. At once there is strife. The lawyers are consulted and enlisted. There is a trial. The character of the dead man is dragged from his coffin. Was he queer? Was he not insane? Foibles and harmless eccentricities are paraded from scorn and mockery. There was a time when the initial phrase, "In the name of God Amen," was of solemn and abiding force. The dead man spoke. Who can use the phrase to-day with any assurance that it will be regarded after he is cold and voiceless?—Boston Herald.

Spent More Than $1000

W. W. Baker of Plainview, Neb., writes: "My wife suffered from lung trouble for fifteen years. She tried a number of doctors and spent over $1000 without relief. THE Y. M. C. A. PLANS.

Prospects for Completion of Building are Very Bright.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Bellefonte was organized in 1869. Their work therefore for thirty-five years has been carried on in rented quarters. Now the prospects are that with the financial aid of all they will occupy their own home in course of a few months.

The Property on High street 76 by 200 feet was purchased in 1903. It is being remodeled and greatly enlarged building operations which were discontinued in August and September are now resumed.

The building will contain Reception room, Reading room, Game room, Parlor, Secretary's office, Lecture room, two rooms for Boy's Department and Educational classes, Gymnasium, Bowling alleys, Baths etc. The membership opportunities will be open to all young men. A competent young man will be in charge of the Gymnasium as Physical Director.

Subscriptions are needed for money to complete the undertaking. The Directors and Trustees mean to give all our people an opportunity to make contributions, a few large pledges are seemingly necessary and a large number of smaller sums, about $26,000 will be the entire cost including furnishing of the building. Thus far $15,600 has been pledged. Checks should be made payable to Darius Waite Treasurer.

One of Many.

H. A. Tisdale, of Summerton, S. C., suffered for twenty years with the piles. Specialists were employed and many remedies used but relief and permanent good was found only in the use of De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. This is only one of the many, many cures that have been effected by this wonderful remedy. In buying Witch Hazel Salve it is only necessary to see that you get the genuine DeWitt's, made by E. C. DeWitt & Co. in Chicago, and a cure is certain DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures all kinds of piles, cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, tetter, ring-worm, skin diseases, etc. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

Pastor's Tenth Anniversary.

The tenth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev J. M. Rearick was observed in the Lutheran church Sunday Oct. 16. The major part of the sermons was devoted to the exposition from a scriptural point of view to the text, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." A few figures, revealing the work as a pastor, were indulged in, and are here noted; Marriage ceremonies performed, eighty-seven; children baptized, one hundred and seventy-five; members added by confirmation, two hundred and thirty-five; added by certificate, one hundred and twenty-one—total three hundred and fifty-six. The membership at present is four hundred and eleven, a gain of fifty-seven in ten years.

The benevolent offerings for the past year were $314, adding to this the work of the various societies the sum would be increased to $600.

Dr. W. H. Schuyler, at the conclusion of Rev. Rearick's remarks, spoke concerning the unity of feeling existing between the pastors composing the Penns Valley Ministerial Association. In fitting words he presented a purse previously raised by the members of the church, which part of the program was a surprise to the pastor.—Centre Reporter.

To Discover Gold by Telephone.

Among the scientific notes in Collier's for October 15 is the following rather amazing announcement.

A new way of prospecting has been tried experimentally, and is reaching the point where it is practically useful. The method is based on the differences in the electrical conductivity of the earth due to the presence of ore deposits. Most ores are much better conductors of electricity than the soil and rocks, although some others are almost insulators.

In making use of these facts to locate beds of ore two electrodes are grounded about one hundred yards apart. In the circuit is an introduction coil with a glass condenser and two spark gaps. The current as it passes through the ground is tested by two telephone receivers connected to portable electrodes which are usually grounded about seventy feet apart. The make and break of the current in passing through the ground is heard in the telephone as ticks. As the electrodes attached to the telephones are moved about, the variations in the intensity of the tapping in the telephones give an indication of the presence and position of the ore deposits. Although the method is not out of the experimental stage, yet it seems to promise much for itself in the future.

Do You Know Vin-te-na?

Everybody who doesn't feel in prime condition physically or mentally really ought to make its acquaintance.

Vin-te-na is without doubt, the most speedy remedy for impoverished blood and weakened nerves that can be found anywhere. The reasons for its merit are, first, it contains the precise ingredients needed by the blood and nerves of people who are in anyway run down or weakened by any cause whatever, and secondly there is conscience back of ever bottle of it. The first aim of its manufacturers was to produce a nerve and blood tonic that should positively cure. Thought of its curing quality went before thought of its selling quality. When you buy Vin-te-na you buy an honest medicine of positive merit. It will ward off colds and grippe and keep you in tip top condition during the most trying months of the winter.

THOUGHT ATTACK WAS TO BE MADE

Explanation of Baltic Fleet Officers of

NORTH SEA INCIDENT

Heard Cannon Shot From Unknown Vessel—Then they Formed in Battle Line and Opened Fire on Trawlers.

ARRIVAL OF FLEET OFF SPAIN

VIGO, Spain, Oct. 26.—The arrival of the Russian battleships Emperor Alexander III. Borodino, Orel and Kniaz Souvaroff, and the Transport Anatol, which have anchored in this port, has caused considerable excitement The commander of the port immediately boarded the Russian flagship and informed Admiral Rojestvensky that the Spanish government could not permit the war ships to coal within the port. Admiral Rojestvensky replied that his vessels needed repairs, and that for that reason he had separated from the remainder of his squadron.

The commander of the port promised to inform the Spanish government of the Admiral's statement, and communicate the government's reply as soon as it was received.

THE PROTESTS NOT HEEDED.

In spite of this five German colliers anchored in port alongside the battleships, whereupon the commander of the port sent an aide-de-camp to beg Admiral Rojestvensky not to violate Spanish waters, at the same time beged the commanding officer of the Spanish cruiser Estramadura to notify the colliers that they must obey the port authorities.

Eventually Admiral Rojestvensky promised that he would not coal in Spanish waters, at the same time begging the commander of the port to obtain the governments permission for each warship to take on four hundred tons of coal with which to reach Tangier. Shortly afterwards three colliers sailed for Tangiers, but two remained alongside the Russian warships.

ACCORDED THE USUAL HONORS.

During the afternoon Admiral Rojestvensky, accompanied by the commanders of his battle ships, visited the military governor, the French consul and the commander of the port, receiving the usual honors.

As far as can be seen the crews of the battleships are very uneasy. Sentinels are closely watching every movement within the harbor. All four of the warships seem to be cleared for action.

It is rumored that the object of the Spanish government in requesting the Russians to remain the shortest possible time at Vigo is to prevent the possibility of Japanese attacks, whose presence in the province of Galicia is suspected.

It is learned that three other Russian warships have anchored in Arosa Bay. The government has refused them permission to coal in Spanish waters.

The Spanish warships Marques de Lavictoria and Vasco Nunez de Balbao are keeping watch along the coast.

The authorities have ordered that all the fishing boats shall fly the national flag in order to avoid a repetition of the Dogger Bank incident.

EXPLANATION OF THE ATTACK.

Prince Keretelli an officer of the battleship Emperor Alexander III, has been interviewed and gives the following explanation of the attack by the Baltic squadron upon the British trawler off Dogger Bank:

"The transport Anatol which was steaming ahead of the squadron was suddenly surrounded by eight torpedo boats and requested assistance, whereupon the battleship division advanced and signalled to the unknown vessels to leave or disclose their nationality. The vessels refused to obey and advanced among the Russian battleships. Suddenly a cannon shot was heard from an unknown vessel. Then the Admiral formed in battle line and replied to the fire, afterwards continuing his voyage.'

St. Petersburg, October 28.—Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's explanation of the trawler incident is fully as sensational as the news of the firing upon the fishing fleet which set all England aflame. He declares that he was attacked in the darkness by two torpedo boats, which came upon the squadron from the direction of the fishing fleet. He opened fire and believes that he sank one of the torpedo boats, the other making off for cover among the fishermen.

As soon as he noticed the fishermen Admiral Rojestvensky ceased firing. He proceeded on his way without leaving any vessel behind and says that he believes the vessel which the fishermen reported remained on the scene for six hours without offering succor to the drowning men was the other torpedo boat, either waiting for her consort or repairing damage inflicted by the fire of his ships.

In concluding his telegram Admiral Rojestvensky expressed in the most warm-hearted way the regrets of the whole squadron to the fishermen who had suffered and to the families of the victims

Rojestvensky's report was telegraphed from Vigo direct to the emperor, who received it Thursday night. It was communicated Friday morning to Ambassador Hardinge by Foreign Minister Lamsdorff himself.

There is reason to believe that the British embassy was also acquainted with the information which reached the Russian authorities some time ago of the arrival at and subsequent mysterious disappearance from Hull of twenty Japanese, mention of which was made in these dispatches October 25.

It is pointed out that the original version of the incident as recited by the captain of the trawler Moultmein coincides closely with Rojestuensky's. The captain said that while the squadron was passing he noticed two torpedo boats which approached so near that he thought they intended boarding him, when they sheered off, heading back for the squadron. Almost immediately after the squadron opened fire.

According to one account of Rojestvensky's report it states that there were no torpedo boats with the squadron when the incident occurred. If this is true the statement of the captain of the Moultmein would completely corroborate Rojestvensky.

St. Petersburg, October 28 —3.10 A. M.—The mystery of the trawler affair, instead of being cleared up by Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's report, appears to be deeper than ever, and it is felt that a direct issue has now been raised between Russia and Great Britain and that the incident has entered upon an even more delicate stage.

Public sentiment in both countles doubtless will demand the most searching investigation to establish facts, and probably neither nation will be willing to accept the result of an exparte inquiry by the other. The outcome probably will be a mixed tribunal of some sort. This, at least, is the suggestion of some of the cooler men here, as it is felt that only thus could a repetition of the Maine inquiry be avoided.

Popular excitement has reached a pitch unequalled since the beginning of the war. Public sympathy and confidence undoubtedly are with Admiral Rojestvensky, and should Russia choose to stand upon his version without further inquiry there is no question but such a course would be popular with the masses, who would be willing to back the government in the controversy to the utmost extremity. It is most unlikely, however, that the government will adopt such a course. It is much more probable that after the first flush of excitement has faded, a middle way will be found whereby the facts can be established and the national pride of both countries be maintained.

The Greatest Temperance Force.

By all odds the greatest promoter of temperance in the last sixty years has been the change in business of every description which has especially marked that period. Everywhere the machine has superseded the man or the woman. This is as notable on the farm and in the farmer's home as in town. In manufacturing, mining, engineering, transportation, and almost all other business pursuits, the individual worker has become a part of the machine, and the mechanism is too costly to be intrusted to the direction or manipulation of a man whose brain is liable to be befogged. In transportation, and, to a less extent, in mining and manufactures, not only the safety of property, but of life, depends upon the sobriety of employees. In the old days a wage-worker could go off on an occasional spree without interrupting the work of others; now the absence of a single employee may tie up the business or the branch of the factory in which he works.

This is, as we have said, the greatest of all influences tending to the promotion of temperance by and through the condemnation of intemperance in the use of intoxicants. It has wrought a great change in the past sixty years, and it remains a permanent, ever-present, and always operative power for good, for "the industrial world" will continue to have "no place for the man who gets drunk," and that is and will always be the strongest restraint upon appetite.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

"DUTCHY."

He came to the ward one evening alone a pathetic figure, his thick, yellow hair cropped off his shoulders. His blue eyes were full of pain and a cough racked his frame. A battered violin case was tightly clasped in his arms. He was very clean but shabby.

For several days he lay partially unconscious, while pleuro-pneumonia ran its course. He did not rove in delirium, but sung softly German folk songs, checked by coughing spells, or played upon an imaginary violin. He was put in a private room across from the nurse room.

With returning consciousness he asked pitifully for his beloved instrument. The doctor said it would do no harm if he had ti beside him and Miss Stone, the head nurse, brought it up from the custodian's office. He gave a cry of joy and cuddled it in his arms. He slept with his arms about it, caressed and talked to it lovingly when he was awake.

He was very young.

A few days after he was admitted a large coarse blonde woman with peroxide of hydrogen tresses, called to inquire about him. She became garrulous and Miss Stone learned that she was one of the amazons in "The Blue-Stocking" company playing at one of the theatres.

"Dutchy," she said, "is a big fool, but I was a bigger one when I married him."

She looked ten or twelve years older than he. She chewed gum vigorously.

"He used to play in concerts in Berlin," she went on, "and some one told him he could make lots of money in America and he was fool enough to believe it. So he come to N 'Yark. I was dancin' in a hall on the Bowery and he got a place in the orchestra. He went daffy over me and followed me around until I married him to get rid of him." She burst into boisterous laugh. "He ain't good for nothing but his music. I guess he's all in this time, ain't he, nurse? Well' so long."

She went away humming "It's a Shame, a Measly Shame," and was joined in the corridor by a burly fellow in loud clothes.

When "Dutchy" recovered consciousness he asked whether his "wife" had come to see him. Upon being told that she had called his pale face glowed and he said softly, "She ist so ferry goot, mein vife, und so beeoo-tiful nich wahr? She ist so—vot you call him?—smart. And I luf her even more than my violin," with a wistful smile. Then he patted it and caressed it as though he would tell it not to mind.

His "bee-oo-tiful vife" came occasionally—always accompanied by the ex-prize fighter in checks and stripes, her broad hat weighed down by feathers, her stumpy fingers glittering with rings. "Dutchy" would take her coarse, flat hands between his long, thin, white ones and imprint a kiss first on one and then on the other, looking up at her dumbly, with adoring eyes. The contrast between his thin, refined, sensitive face and her coarse, painted cheeks and her staring blue eyes were no greater than between the two souls.

Then "Bill," the ex-prize fighter, would clap poor "Dutchy" on the back and send him into a coughing spell which would last for ten minutes.

While "Gladys" and "Bill" talked of "skits" and "turns" and "specialties," "Dutchy," among his pillows, listened quietly. "Bill" sometimes addressed the woman as "Me dear" and then "Dutchy" would turn his face away a moment and draw his violin closer, softly caressing its strings.

He become able to leave his bed at last, but strength returned slowly. They said his heart was weak and though there was no organic trouble, a shock or strain would stop its beating.

He was the best of patients and treated the nurse with old-fashioned courtesy. One Sunday afternoon he begged permission to play a little upon this violin. Miss Stone hesitated, knowing there is nothing more torturing to nervous ears than a violin badly played. He said he would play softly, with his door closed, and at length she gave her consent. Returning ten minutes later the strain of "Schumann's Tramerei," played by a master hand, reached her music-loving ears. She opened "Dutchy's" door and went in. When later, she was aroused by the pompous voice of the superintendent of nurses, who stood in the doorway, she awoke as from a dream.

"What is all this?" demanded that majestic lady in imperious tones. "This must be stopped at once. I am surprised—" But she went no further, for behind her came the voice of Dr. Strangely, the superintendent of the hospital,

"Pardon me, Miss Hampden, but this is exactly what I desire for my neurotic patients. Such music is better than medicine. I congratulate you, Miss Stone, on discovering such a genius,"

Thereafter every Sunday afternoon there was music in that ward. Patients from other parts of the hospital clustered about the corridor door. Fractious ones became more manageable. Impatient nurses became more tolerant of unreasonable whims and fancies. Under the stimulus of conferring pleasure and benefit upon others "Dutchy" visibly improved in health and strength.

"Gladys" visits grew farther apart and and then she "went on the road." Preparations were in progress for a concert to be given in the amphitheatre of the hospital with "Dutchy" as principal performer. The day before the date of the affair a letter came to him. Miss Stone carried it to him where he sat on the fire-escape, his beloved violin on his arms.

An hour later the boy brought from the office a legal-looking envelope addressed to "Dutchy," which he said had been overlooked when distributing the mail. The nurse found him in the same place. Both arms were clasped about his violin, his cheek resting against it. She touched his forehead. It was very cold. As she lifted his wrist a paper fell from his lifeless fingers. She picked it up mechanically and read:

"Say, Dutchy, im goin' to git a divors, im tired of you, you oin'tt no good. The lawyer will send the papers, so you better keep quiet and let me git the divors. I'm going to marry bill. So no more from GLADYS."—Chicago News.

Here's a Way to Save Doctor Bills.

It was an association of gentlemen, professionally physicians and chemists, all of whom were born in the drug trade, so to speak, and who have been connected with it all their lives, who first gave to the world Castoria, which as everyone knows is a pleasant and effective remedy for the ailments of infants and children. It has always been recognized as a meritorious preparation, and it has been the greatest popularity ever enjoyed by any remedy ever put on the market; attained, not by flamboyant advertising or appeals to ignorance or vulgar prejudice, but by inherent merit. All physicians recommend it, and many, very many, prescribe it.

Many parents call in the family physician. Many other parents take advantage of what the physician told them when he was first called in consultation. All good amily physicians say: "Give the children Castoria. Healthy parents know this remedy for they took it themselves as children. It was more than thirty years that Castoria made a place for itself in the household. It bore the signature of Charles H. Fletcher then, as it does to-day. The signature is the guarantee, and is accepted in thousands of homes where there are children.

Much is printed nowadays about big families. Dr. William I. McCann, of Omaha, Neb., is the father of one of these much-read about families Here is what he says:

"As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have, in my years of practice, found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home.

Charles H. Fletcher has received hundreds of letters from prominent physicians who have the same esteem for Castoria that Dr. McCann has. Not only do these physicians say they use Castoria in their own families, but they prescribe it for their patients. First of all it is a vegetable preparation which assimilates the food and regulates the stomach and bowels. After eating comes sleeping, and Castoria looks out for that too. It allays feverishness and prevents loss of sleep, and this absolutely without the use of opium, morphine or other baneful narcotic.

Medical journals are reluctant to discuss proprietary medicines. Hall's Journal of Health, however, says: "Our duty is to expose danger and record the means for advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health by regulating the system, not by stupefying, it and our readers are entitled to the information."

"I thank Dr. Pierce for the kind advice he gave when I wrote to him."

"I am thankful to the friend who first recommended your medicine," writes Mrs. Annie M. Brook, of Smithfield, Fayette Co., Pa. "We have a twelve pound baby, three weeks old. I took three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' before baby came, and the time was only one hour and a half. Have had five children, and before this always had a severe time, lasting two or three days, and never was able to do any work for about two months afterward. Now I am doing all the work for four children. My friends say I look better now than ever before. We told one of my sisters to take 'Favorite Prescription,' which she did, and when her child was born the time of suffering was very short. She has better health now than since her marriage, some years ago. We cannot praise Dr. Pierce's medicines enough. I thank Dr. Pierce for the kind advice he gave when I wrote to him. Whenever I see other women suffering I tell them about your wonderful medicines."

The benefits resulting from a consultation by letter with Dr. Pierce are testified to by thousands of grateful women who have been made new women by his medical advice and fatherly counsel given absolutely without cost or fee.

BRIEF MENTION

Short Items of Local Interest Gathered By The Way Side

—Geo. Darr is quite ill with pneumonia at his home near Coleville.

—Mrs. Frank Warfield entertained a party of fifteen ladies at her home on Curtin street Thursday evening.

—The Central Railroad Co., of Pa., are improving the appearance of their depot by the application of a coat of paint.

—Mrs. Edward Halleron, a well known resident of Houtzdale, died on Wednesday night, aged about 70 years, leaving three sons and one daughter.

—Andrew Carnegie, the great steel magnate and philanthropist, will be at State College next month when the new Carnegie library is to be dedicated.

—Hon. James A. Beaver, of Bellefonte, called on President Roosevelt at the White House the other day and invited him to one of the State College functions next spring.

—Parents, are you sure that your boys are attending school regularly? Don't let your "dear good little boy" mislead you. It is not a bad idea for the parent and teacher to meet occasionally and compare notes.

—A county bridge is being built over Sinking Creek, east of Tusseyville, near the home of W. F. Rockey. The creek is wide at that point, and the bridge necessarily will be a comparatively heavy structure.

DIED.—Russell, the five month old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Eckenroth, died at their home on east High street Sunday night at 12:30 of convulsions after a week's illness. The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment in the Union cemetery.

—Julia, wife of Ezra Smith, died at her home near Rock View Thursday at midnight of heart failure. She was married twice her first husband being John Koon, who died many years ago. Later she married Ezra Smith, who survives her with four sons and three daughters.

—A genuine surprise was planned for Michael Smith, of Potters Mills, by his family and some thirty others, mostly relatives. He reached his fifty-second birthday Tuesday, and it was to celebrate this event that his friends congregated unknown to Mr. Smith. Besides his relatives who participated were Rev. J. M. Rearick, Centre Hall; Thomas Elliott, of New Buffalo and Charles Sneck, of Pittsburg.

—An interesting and very impressive service was held in St. John's Reformed church Sunday morning when the pastor, the Rev. Ambrose M. Schmidt, baptized nine infants. The names of the children baptized are: Lois Foreman, Ralph Kaup Owens, Joseph Lorraine Badger, Jane Edna Kilpatrick, Hugh Wilson Grose, Alfred Emanuel Hassinger, Martha Elizabeth Roan, Grace Virginia Trafford and Cornelius Stover Meyer.

—It is rumored at Ebensburg that Thomas Cunningham, who is in Cambria county jail awaiting trial on the charge of murdering his wife, has made a confession stating that he had attacked his wife and administered the beating which resulted in her subsequent death, after she had threatened to expose him for his participation in the Portage hold-up, when Charles Hays was shot to death and Patrick Campbell seriously wounded. Rumor also has it that three men, who are well known in the vicinity of Portage have been named as accomplices by Cunningham.

—At 9 o'clock Tuesday night at the Curwensville electric light plant, while assisting in the work of installing a new dynamo Wm. Lewis slipped and fell against the machine, touching the conveyor of an electric current with one arm. He threw out the other arm as he was falling and caught a conductor which effected a circuit and immediately he was a dead man. The young man was a brother of John Lewis, who was killed on Norris' saw mill at Curwensville about a month ago. And singularly, it is not yet a year since the father of these young men was buried. He was aged about 25 years.

—The Altoona machine and car shops are working full time and in many departments the men are working over time to get out the work needed in the operation of the road. The shop force has been gradually increased until it now numbers almost the same as it did before the suspension struck the city. The men will all have a good month and the amount of money paid out during the coming pay day will be greatly increased over the last pay day. The officials of the company anticipate good business during the winter and they intend to have the motive power and rolling stock in such a condition as to meet the demands that may be made upon them in handling the traffic with dispatch.

—Go into politics if you want to know who you are, and where you stand.

—The new directory of Altoona fixes the population of that city at nearly 58,000.

—If you want to get your neck, shoulders, arms and legs broken, just join a foot ball team and pitch in.

—Fashion decrees that browns will be the popular colors this years, although some of the political managers cannot get rid of the blues.

—Mrs. Frank Warfield entertained a party of lady friends at cards, Monday evening, at her palatial home on the corner of Curtin and Allegheny streets.

—Lee, the second son of William Noll, of Axe Mann, was shot in the leg while out Hallowe'en Monday evening. The wound, while not serious, is very painful.

—Handsome upholstered office chairs have been placed in the Bush house office. They match the woodwork and add greatly to the comfort and enjoyment of the guests of the hotel.

—Tuesday, Nov. 1, was the first day on which it was lawful to kill rabbits, deer, etc. The rabbits are reported to be very plentiful in certain localities. Deer are not plentiful according to reports.

—Mrs. Claude Thompson is confined to her home by an accident which is causing her considerable pain. In jumping from a lounge on which she had been standing she sprained her ankle quite severely.

—The inimitable James Schofield, of Bellefonte, was a visitor Saturday at W. H. Pifer's where he heartily partook of roast bear. "Jimmy" is quite a talker and kept the party in good spirits by his ready flow of oratory and wit. After dinner he gave a fine explanation to those present as to how to vote a straight or mixed ticket at the coming election.—Mill Hall cor. to L. H. Democrat.

—Edwin J. Hadley's exhibition of moving pictures at the Opera House Monday evening under the auspices of Gregg Post No. 95 G. A. R., was a fine entertainment, in fact, one of the most entertaining exhibitions of the kind ever presented to a Bellefonte audience. There was a full house and great applause was given to every act. The Post should be satisfied with the reception given by the people. It was a fine show in everyway and worthy of the generous support which it received.

—Bellefonte hunters and all other hunters please stand up. Mrs. Moore Fredericks, of Lock Haven is way ahead of every last one of you. Wednesday morning on a street of that city the lady received a bump on the side of the head and at the same moment a fine, plump pheasant dropped at her feet. The bird was so stunned that it was unable to move and she stooped down and picking it up carried it home with her. In due time the bird recovered from the shock, then its head was whacked off and the carcass was prepared for the table.

—It could be expected of an American youth that if he plays football against his parents' wish, and gets hurt, he will suffer silently. Such was the case with Fred, the 8-year-old son of Frank Sproul, of Wateontown, who when he found himself incapable of raising his arm to convey food to his mouth at supper, quietly remarked that he was not hungry and slid away from the table. The father followed and found the boy crying. Investigation proved that he had broken his arm in two places, between the elbow and wrist while playing football during the afternoon.

—Agents of the pure food commission throughout the state are collecting samples of sausage which they propose to test for poisonous preservatives. This is the beginning of the sausage season, and the warm weather makes it difficult to keep. For this reason preservatives are more generally used, if at all, than at any other time. That is why the pure food agents steps in to insure absolute purity. The packers claim that any preservatives that they use are wholly harmless, and they assert that if they are treated to the same medicine that was forced upon the druggists they will fight.

—Priscilla, wife of Frank Yearick died Saturday evening at 8 o'clock at her home in Woodward after a lingering illness of 8 weeks with Typhoid fever. She was aged 54 years, 8 months and 26 days and is survived by three daughters one sister Mrs. John A. Neidig, of Penn Hall and a brother Levi Custenborder, of Lincoln, Neb. She was a member of the Reformed church, a kind and affectionate wife and mother. The funeral took place Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. Buck, of the Evangelical church officiating. Interment in the cemetery at Woodward.

—George Kiernan the famous impersonator, who appeared in Petrikin Hall last Friday evening under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., was all that was claimed for him. His rendition of the monologue, Rip Van Winkle, was in short, one of the finest things of the kind ever listened to in Bellefonte. The hall was well filed with a large and cultured audience. There are few before the public that can give a monologue entertainment to the satisfaction of a cultured and critical audience, but Geo. Kiernan is one of the few, judging from the universal opinion of all who heard him.

—Love is never satisfied until it gets both arms full.

—David Barlett Sr. is suffering from a badly sprained ankle.

—Mrs. M. W. Jackson, mother of Mrs. W. F. Reeder, is quite seriously ill at her quarters at the Brockerhoff House.

—Centre county politics is being interestedly viewed from a very high perch by the woggly bird on the jingo tree.

—Louis Doll, the veteran shoe maker, is quite ill with rheumatism of the kidneys at his home on West Bishop street.

—Course tickets for the teacher's institute entertainments cost only $1.00. Single admission tickets 50 cents. Save fifty cents by buying a course ticket.

—Presbyterian Synod of Pennsylvania has adopted a resolution setting apart next Christmas as a day of special prayer for the restoration of peace in the Far East.

—Miss Sallie Dunlap gave a party Saturday evening at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Dunlap, in honor of Miss Gray a young lady soon to become a bride.

—The Saturday "War Cry" the organ of the Salvation Army was a memorial number, it being just one year since the death of Consul Emma Booth Tucker.

—Rev. W. E. Karns, of Jersey Shore, was thrown from a buggy on Wednesday evening, the result of his horse taking fright at the cars, and received painful though not serious injuries.

—Malcolm Waite who has been employed at Sechlers grocery store resigned his position Saturday evening and has accepted the position as typewriter at the Potter—Hoy Hardware store.

—Orrin T. Noble, a well known citizen and a prominent Mason and Odd Fellow of Lock Haven died at his home in that place last Thursday and was buried on Sunday. He was 76 years of age and born at Howard.

—Rev. Davis, of the Lemont charge of the United Brethren church, preached a powerful sermon on Sunday morning in the United Brethren church at this place. His subject being "Who is my neighbor." Mr. Davis is a young man with a wonderfully bright and successful future before him.

—Mr. and Mrs. Gottlieb Haag of East Bishop street are preparing to celebrate their Golden Wedding the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Monday November the fourteenth, 1904. They will give a big dinner at the Hotel Haag at one o'clock p. m. on above mentioned date.

—Sunday morning about 10 o'clock as the Christian people of Bellefonte were wending their way to church the fire alarm sounded. The fire proved to be in a defective flue in John Keichline's property on East Bishop street on the side occupied by J. S. McCargar. The fire was put out without serious damage

—On Monday the Academy schools were moved from their temporary quarters in the Brockerhoff building on Bishop street to the lower floor of their handsome new school building on the hill. On next Monday the second floor will be ready for occupancy and a part of the students quarters will be moved there then

—Paul Royer, aged 8 years, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Royer, of North Water street, was taken to the Bellefonte Hospital Monday morning to undergo an operation. He has been suffering from pleuro pneumonia superinduced, it is said, by an accident which he received while playing at school.

—Born at Pennsylvania Furnace on January 22, 1832. John M. Bateman died at the home of his son, J. B. Bateman at Bellwood, Oct. 26, 1904. at 11 o'clock a. m. Mr. Bateman's home was at Martinsburg, and about ten days ago he and his wife came to Bellwood to visit their son and other relatives. Mr. Bateman was seriously ill only a few days. He suffered from stomach trouble. He was a track foreman for the Pennsylvania railroad company for nearly thirty years, having been retired in 1901. He was a member of lodge No. 445. I O O. F., a veteran of the civil war, having served as a corporal in company C, Twelfth regiment, Pennsylvania volunteer cavalry, and was also a member of the Pennsylvania railroad relief and the Methodist Episcopal church.

—William Reynolds is the name of a Jersey shore boy, aged nineteen years, who until this week never had his hair cut. But the desire to join a local drum corps that is organizing was strong enough to induce Billy to sacrifice his Sampson locks, so he marched himself to a barber shop and directed that the necessary amputation performance proceed, for it is a rule of the new drum corps that no long eared or long haired urchin shall belong to it. Young Reynolds has attracted a great amount of attention by his singular whim both at home and abroad. Metropolitan Sunday newspapers have depicted him as being a modern Sampson and the Seven Southerland Sisters company wanted him to go on the demonstrating stage. But while no show could induce him to make business out of the long locks, the drum corps was sufficiently magnetic to even draw his cherished locks from the scalp.

This firm owns large stores besides operating a number of saw mills and lumber jobs in that section of the country. We are glad Mr. Bayard has secured such an excellent opening with so excellent a firm. He is a bright, energetic, hustling young fellow and we predict for him rapid promotion and a bright future.

Birthday Anniversary.

About 42 friends of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Shuey gathered Monday evening, at their pleasant home on High street, to assist in celebrating the 42nd birthday anniversary of Mrs. Shuey.

The party was in the nature of a surprise for Mrs. Shuey, and was gotten up by Mr. Shuey and his interesting family of daughters. The home was beautifully decorated with foliage for the occasion. The evening was pleasantly spent in intercourse and the playing of Hallow E'en games and later in disposing of a Hallow E'en supper after which all departed for their homes, wishing their hostess many happy returns of the day.

Racing at the Fair Grounds.

The racing at the Fair Ground Friday afternoon was poorly attended which is to be regretted as the proceeds were for a very worthy and needy object, the Bellefonte Hospital. There were two races, a pacing race and a running race. M. Fauble's "Little Billy," won the race, W. V. Larimer's "Village Boy" second, Dr. Jones "Ben H," third.

—The Misses Nannie Schofield and Lillian Walker will give a leap year dance in the armory on Friday evening of this week.

DIED—John Strohm died at his home near Zion Sunday evening between 6 and 7 o'clock. Death was due to the infirmities of old age. He had passed the 78th milestone in life's journey. He was a farmer all his life and for forty years was a faithful member of the Lutheran church. The funeral took place Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment in the Zion cemetery.

—Miss Winifred Gates entertained a party of her young friends at a Hallow E'en party Monday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs Charles L. Gates on East Lamb street. About twenty-eight young ladies and gentlemen were present and they spent a most delightful evening. The interior of the house was very prettily decorated and games of all descriptions were indulged in.

Bellefonte Furnace Blown In—Bright Prospects for a Long Run.

The Bellefonte Furnace which had been idle since early in the summer was blown in on Tuesday of last week, with prospects for a long and continuous run.

In only a little over five weeks from the time the word to go ahead was received the old lining in the Bellefonte furnace was torn out, a new one put in and the furnace fires relighted.

The torch was applied on Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 by little Margaret Kelly, the daughter of furnaceman William Kelly. The customary demonstration over such an event was missing because President J. W. Gephart was so anxious to get the furnace going again that he had given orders to light the fires the instant all was in readiness. The anxiety was not without warrant, either, for orders have already been booked for the output for three months ahead, all of it foundry iron, the highest grade they make.

Death of Mrs. Hannah Ripka.

Mrs. Hannah Ripka died Sunday at 5 a. m., at her home in Pine Grove Mills of heart trouble, aged 74 years. She was a member of the Reformed church and the mother of three children, one dead and two living. The surviving ones are Sarah, at home, and Mrs. John Fagan of Altoona.

The funeral was held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock and she was enterred beside her husband in the old cemetery.

—On Saturday November 5th the annual students excursion to State College will take place. Teachers and pupils of the Public schools, private schools and Academy will visit the College and take in the foot ball game between the College scrub team and the Academy. The round trip tickets will be 25 cents but be sure and take a lunch with you. Train leaves at 10:30 a. m., returning reaches Bellefonte at 6 p. m.
